GOVERNOR BYRD DISCUSSES AMENDMENTS

Richmond, Va., April 23.—The following statement from Governor Harry F. Byrd deals with the history and effect of the Amendments to the State Constitution which the people will vote on June 19. Governor Byrd says:

On July 10, 1928, the present Constitution of Virginia will be 26 years old. In the main, it has served Virginia well. To meet new conditions, however, which have arisen during a quarter of a century as the State has progressed, it has become advisable to provide for a general revision of the Constitution by amendments, still preserving the important fundamentals of the original Constitution.

In 1922 an act was passed by the legislature submitting to the voters the question of calling a constitutional convention to revise the Constitution. This proposal was defeated overwhelmingly. The people of Virginia then expressed their disapproval of a constitutional convention, with power to proclaim a new Constitution, and at an expense of perhaps one million dollars.

In my campaign for election to the governorship I made question of the method of amending the Constitution was a major issue. I opposed a new constitutional convention. I favored a revision by means of a commission of outstanding Virginians appointed to suggest amendments to the Constitution, subject to the approval of two sessions of the General Assembly and the final approval of the people of the State by direct vote.

I am convinced now, as I was then, that this method is preferable to a constitutional convention. Such convention can proclaim a new Constitution, thus depriving the people of the right to express themselves by direct vote on the merits of the changes proposed. The method, too, is expensive. The last constitutional convention was in session thirteen months and cost approximately $500,000. A new convention would cost possibly $1,000,000.

In conformity with my campaign pledge, I recommended to the General Assembly of 1926 the creation of a commission to suggest amendments to the Constitution. A law was passed providing for such commission and appropriating the sum of $10,000 for its expenses. Of the amount appropriated, only $5,000 was expended.

Able and outstanding Virginians were selected to serve on the commission.

The commission held public hearings and obtained suggestions from the public. After careful study and many days of painstaking work, a revised constitution was recommended for the approval of the General Assembly.

Two important amendments, namely, the amendment prohibiting the State from taxing land and tangible personal property, and the so-called shorter ballot amendment, which had been adopted by the session of 1926, were approved and incorporated in the recommendations of the commission.

Full publicity was given to the changes recommended. The session of the General Assembly of 1927 carefully considered all the changes suggested, eliminated some, and added others. In accordance with the law, the amendments were then advertised, in the press, and 150,000 copies printed for public distribution throughout the State. In the campaign for re-election of the State Senate and House of Delegates in the summer and fall of 1927 the constitutional changes were made an issue, the people thereby expressing themselves as to whether or not the amendments should be approved for final submission to the voters.

The General Assembly of 1928, with two exceptions, submitted the amendments as proposed and agreed to by the sessions of 1926 and 1927.

Forty-seven material changes are made in the present Constitution. The instrument is shortened and certain obsolete sections stricken out.

The submission bill passed by the sessions of 1928 provides for a ballot which will include five major proposals. So as to avoid the necessity of having separate votes on a large number of changes, some of minor importance and others to which no opposition has been voiced, the first proposal, embodying 43 changes, will be known as proposal No. 1, requiring but one vote. That the changes grouped in proposal No. 1 are generally approved is shown by the nearly unanimous vote upon this resolution by the General Assemblies of 1927 and 1928.

Controversial matters, particularly the amendment relieving land and tangible personal property from State taxation, and the so-called shorter ballot amendments, are separated. The voters may register their will on these questions independently of other amendments which appear to have the general approval. The General Assembly adopted a new departure in numbering the amendments on the ballot so that each amendment can be clearly identified.

The total cost of the special election will not exceed $45,000. Of this amount, the State will pay the cost of the Judges and clerks of election. For economy, the submission bill provides that three judges shall be employed and that one of the judges shall act as clerk, instead of employing three judges and two clerks as is usually done. The State will pay approximately $35,000 of this cost, and the 122 localities will divide a cost of $10,000, for the printing of the ballots, mileage in carrying the ballots to the precinct, canvassers, etc. This will mean, therefore, that including the cost of the commission to suggest amendments, plus the cost of the special election, the total cost of a general revision of the Constitution will not exceed $50,000, as compared to the cost of approximately $1,000,000 were the revision made by a constitutional convention.

I make this preliminary statement so that the steps taken to insure the fullest possible consideration of the pending amendments may be understood. Two sessions of the General Assembly have approved and submitted these amendments, the members having been elected at different times. The fullest possible publicity has been given to all changes recommended. If the amendments are for the best interests of the people of Virginia they should be adopted; if they are not wise, they should be defeated. But whatever action is taken should be in the light of serious and intelligent consideration, free from all other issues.

The five Proposals carried in the ballot, and to be voted for or against, are as follows:

PROPOSAL No. 1

The general revision of the Constitution of Virginia, except section eighty-one, one hundred and thirty-one, one hundred and forty-five, one hundred and seventy and one hundred and seventy-one thereof, and to repeal by omitting therefrom sections one hundred and twenty-eight, one hundred and forty-eight, one hundred and forty-nine, one hundred and fifty, one hundred and fifty-one and one hundred and eighty-two of the present Constitution.

PROPOSAL No. 2

The amendment to section one hundred and seventy-one of the Constitution of Virginia, providing that no State property tax for State purposes shall be levied on real estate or tangible personal property, except the rolling stock of Public Service Corporations.

PROPOSAL No. 3

The proposed amendment to section one hundred and forty-five of the Constitution of Virginia, providing for the appointment by the Governor for one term, subject to approval by the General Assembly and authorizing the General Assembly, after January first, nineteen hundred and thirty-two, to provide the manner in which and the term for which the Superintendent of Agriculture and Immigration shall be selected.

PROPOSAL No. 4

The amendment to section one hundred and thirty-one of the Constitution of Virginia, providing for the appointment by the Governor for one term, subject to approval by the General Assembly and authorizing the General Assembly, after January first, nineteen hundred and thirty-two, to provide the manner in which and the term for which the Superintendent of Public Instruction shall be selected.

PROPOSAL No. 5

The amendment to section eighty-one of the Constitution of Virginia, providing for the appointment by the Governor for one term, subject to approval by the General Assembly and authorizing the General Assembly, after January first, nineteen hundred and thirty-two, to provide the manner in which and the term for which the Treasurer of Virginia shall be selected.

GREATNESS THROUGH SERVICE

LESSON TEXT—Mark 9:33-37; 10: 35-45.

GOLDEN TEXT—For even the Son of Man came not to be ministered unto but to minister and to give his life a ransom for many.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Doing as Jesus Did.

JUNIOR TOPIC—The Way to Be Great.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—How to Be Truly Great.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—Jesus' Standard of Greatness.

Jesus with His disciples was on His way to Capernaum for the last time. He was soon to leave for Jerusalem where He was to die on the cross for the sins of the world. He sought retirement in order to make clearer to the disciples the meaning of the cross. They were yet unable to understand Him. It was a most pitiable sight to behold the Son of God facing humiliation and death for man's salvation and even the disciples failing to understand the meaning of His suffering.

I. The Disciples Disputing as to Who Should Be the Greatest (Mark 9:33-37).

1. Jesus' searching question (v. 33). His omniscience enabled Him to discern their secret thoughts. The fact that the disciples were wrangling about official position while Jesus was facing humiliation and death shows how completely He was alone in the world.

2. The silent disciples (v. 34). The revelation of the sinfulness of their hearts made them ashamed in His presence. The realization that the eye of the omniscient Lord is over us is the sure and only cure for self-ish wrangling among Christians.

3. The stinging rebuke (vv. 35-37). (1) "If any man desire to be first the same shall be last of all and servant of all." True greatness expresses itself in being willing to take the last and least place and to be a servant of others.

(2) His teaching illustrated (vv. 36, 37). This He did by an acted parable of placing a little child in their midst. A little child is a symbol of dependance and ignorance. By word and example He showed that true greatness is expressed in willingness to all the weak, instruct the ignorant, and serve the needy.

II. The Ambitious Request of James and John (Mark 10:35-45).

1. What it was (vv. 35-37). It was for the positions of pre-eminence in the kingdom. Christ had told them of the awful agony of the cross and also of the glory which should follow. While their request reveals pride and selfish ambition, yet faith in their Lord and a right desire were not wholly lacking. It was not entirely for their personal glory that they made the request, but because of their personal desire to be with their Lord.

2. Jesus' reply (vv. 38-45).

(1) To James and John (vv. 38-40).

a. Their misconception rebuked. "Ye know not what ye ask."

b. Whether or not the greatest in Christ's kingdom are earned, not obtained through favor or arbitrary assignment. The way to honor is through suffering. The cup which they were to drink and the baptism which was the agony of the cross. Christ conceded that the positions which they craved were obtainable, but in a different manner from what they thought.

The way to place of glory is through self-forgetful service and suffering.

Christ's kingdom is through lowly self-forgetful service and suffering.

(2) To the ten disciples (vv. 41-45).

a. Their displeasure (v. 41). The ten disciples were displeased with the request of James and John. Their displeasure was because they were not free from the same selfish ambition. Their action was not prompted by righteous indignation.

b. True greatness declared (vv. 42-45). To minister to others is greater than to be ministered unto (v. 45). Among the Gentile nations, greatness was conceded to those who exercised authority over others. This is the world's conception today. Among the followers of Christ a different standard prevails. The standard of Christ's kingdom is to forget self in devoted service to others, even to the giving of one's life. The supreme example to be followed by all is that which He Himself. His whole life was spent in going about doing good, and on the cross of Calvary He made the supreme sacrifice in providing a ransom for many.

Man-Made Earthquakes Aid Railroad Builders

Leningrad, U. S. S. R.—Man-made earthquakes, set off at distances away upon a simple form of seismograph weighing only a few pounds, are helping Russian engineers to survey the site of the proposed Turkestan-Siberia railroad.

The method is to detonate charges of explosives underground and to record she travel of vibrations through the ground in different directions. By a minute study of the records so obtained it is possible to secure data on the geological formation of the locality.

The new seismograph invented by Prof. Paul M. Nikiforov, director of the Physico-Mathematical Institute of the Russian Academy of Science at Leningrad, is similar to one recently invented in the United States by Dr. John A. Anderson at the Mount Wilson observatory in California. Its main part, the pendulum, is a small vertical cylinder of pure gold suspended a little off center on a pair of fine wires.

Wherever there is any vibration the cylinder turns slightly, in proportion to strength of the shock. A tiny mirror attached to the pendulum reflects a beam of light on a constantly advancing sheet of photographic paper. Every turn of the cylinder, no matter how small, shifts the light spot considerably and it traces a wavy black line. Several of the new instruments are now installed at earthquake stations in Turkestan and Crimea and give complete satisfaction.

Rock Deflects Drills, Oil Engineer Finds

Tulsa, Okla.—Because of deflection of oil-boring tools in underground strata, it is a wise oil man who actually knows where and at what level his well hits production, H. P. Bowen, Tulsa oil engineer, believes.

Bowen says flatly that no drill hole is vertical, and points to the recent instances of two offset wells coming together at a depth of 2,100 feet as proof.

He has worked out a deflection table which shows that a 6,000-foot hole that strays 25 degrees from perpendicular ends up almost half a mile from its starting location, and actually is only 5,433 feet deep.

"As a rule a rotary hole shows the greater amount of deflection," Bowen says. "It has been reported that a 6,200-foot rotary hole of the Roxana Petroleum corporation, on being surveyed, showed a deflection of 25 degrees from perpendicular. Actually, then, it was only about 5,000 feet deep."

NERVES
Went to Pieces
"I suffered a long time, before I tried Cardui," says Mrs. Lillie Pruitt, 150 "K" St., Anderson, S. C. "I was badly run-down in health. My nerves went to pieces, and I had to go to bed.
"One day I saw where a woman, who had a trouble like my own, had been relieved by Cardui. I decided at once to try it. It began to help me from the very first. I took Cardui regularly, for several months, and my improvement was so remarkable my family and friends were delighted."
Try Cardui for your troubles.

If you ask the "successful" man for his formula he will probably give you three basic rules to follow.
